"It is easid of Napoleon by Jomini that, in the campaign of 1815, that great general on the last of April had a regular army of 200,000 men. On the last of June he had increased this force to 414,000. The proportion, adds Jomini, 'had he thought proper to inaugurate a vast system of defense, would have raised it to 700,000 by the last of September.' At the commencement of this rebellion, inaugurated by the attack upon Fort Sumter, the entire military force at the disposal of this Government was and upon our exposed frontiers. They should ed to furnish 500,000 volunteers to serve for three years, or during the war; and by the act approved the 29th of the same month, the adition of 25,000 men to the regular army of the Four bundred can be accommodated, and with United States was authorized. The result is, small expense the number may be increased to that we have now an army of upwards of 600, five hundred.

The report recommends that the system of promotions which prevails in the regular service be applied to the volunteer forces in the respective States, restricting however, the respective States, restricting however.

"It gives me great satisfaction to refer to the motions to men actually in the field. This conspiracy stripped us of arms and munitions, and scattered our navy to the most distant quarters of the globe. The report was a tribute to Lieutenant-Genwith all others, for obvious causes, records the first successes in favor of the insurgents. The disaster of Bull Run was but the natural consequence of the premature advance of our brare but undisciplined troops, which the impatience of the country demanded. The betrayal also of our movements by traitors in our midst enabled the rebels to choose and intrench their position, and by a reinforcement in great strength, at the moment of victory, to snatch it from our grasp. This reverse, however, gave no discouragement to our gallant people; they have crowded into our ranks, and although large numbers have been necessarily rejected, a mighty army in invincible array stands ready to precipitate itself upon the foc. The check that we have received upon the Potomac has, therefore, but postponed the campaign for a few months.
